You are close to turning 65. You know you will have to apply for Medicare soon, but you are unsure about the process. You have heard a lot about Medicare Supplements, Advantage plans and Part D Drug plans, but which one, if any, is best for you?

You are starting to see mail pour in from insurance companies and insurance agents trying to sell you a plan, but it all looks so confusing. You think about attending a Medicare workshop, so you do, but the workshop has only raised MORE questions than you had before.

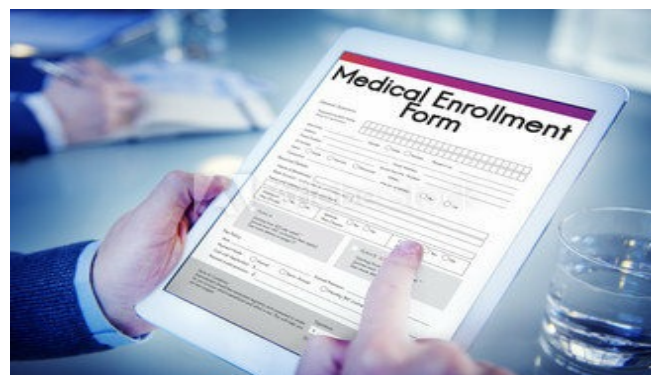

This is where having a personal guide is essential; someone who can walk you through this whole process from when to apply for Medicare Part B, to what type of Medicare insurance supplement plan is best for your situation.
